Lo Que Importa Es El Porque Uri Gneezy

Can economics be passionate? Uri Gneezy and John List's ideas and methods for revealing what really works in addressing big social, business, and economic problems gives us new understanding of the motives underlying human behavior. We can then structure incentives that can get people to move mountains, change their behavior, or at least get a better deal.

URI GNEEZY is the Atkinson/Epstein endowed chair in behavioural economics and professor of economics and strategy at the Rady School of Management at UC San Diego. Before joining the Rady School, Gneezy was a faculty member at the University of Chicago, and at the Israeli universities Technion and Haifa. JOHN LIST is the Homer J. Livingston professor of economics at the University of Chicago. He has been a research associate at the National Bureau of Economics (NBER) for more than a decade and served as senior economist on the President's Council of Economic Advisers for environmental and resource economics. Quite independently, they developed a similar approach to understanding the world, and they have now been working together for ten years. Their work has stimulated an entirely new area of study devoted to exploring people's economic behavior in naturally occurring environments.
